

Liberal Party Returned Again in Sask. Election

Only 2 Social Cred. Members Have Been Elected

At the provincial election in Saskatchewan yesterday the Liberal party was returned to power with substantial members.

For a time it was thought that the Social Credit party would win out but they have made a small show of it despite the fact that almost all of Alberta and S. C. Cabinet Ministers and members were holding meetings in all constituencies of Saskatchewan.

Latest returns received this morning are to the effect that the Liberals are returned to power and Social Credit made a small showing.

Tales Of Adventure On the High Seas Told By Crew Of The Schooner Yankee

Loaded with curios and tales of danger and adventure on the high seas, the schooner Yankee, a former Dutch pilot boat, sailed into Gloucester, Mass., recently from a 18-month, 33,000-mile cruise of the world.

Smiling and happy after their visit to many out-of-the-way spots on the globe, the voyagers joked about their brush with death near Pitcairn Island.

The captain, Irving Johnson, said virtually all of the 20 persons aboard were poisoned seriously after eating fish they had just caught 180 miles from Pitcairn Island last year. The Yankee managed to make the island without any casualties, and the sailors regained their sea-legs while visiting descendants of the Bounty mutineers.

The Yankee travellers repaid kindnesses of the Pitcairn islanders by ferrying 20 tons of hard wood 100 miles from another island for them. While on Pitcairn, Captain Johnson obtained the navel and part of the rudder of the famed Bounty. He shipped it from Tahiti to the Mariners' museum at Newport News, Va.

Among curious stories told by the Yankee were a three-foot wave came from the Solomon Islands, a blow-gun obtained on the coast of the Sultan of Jabor at Malak, poisoned darts for the gun, and numerous trifles.

Captain Johnson said he did not bid Barones von Wagner and her followers on the visit to the Galapagos Islands. He believed the Baroness was a spy. On a previous trip, Johnson spent a New Year's holiday with the baroness.

The Baroness Klara Bonquet de Wagner von Lehmann was the central figure in one of the most stirring mysteries ever spun from the barren crags of the Galapagos Islands. The editor-in-chief of the Chicago Tribune, Charles Leland, for whom Skipper Irving Johnson was searching and couldn't find, wanted into this air the summer of 1933.

Several months before the dark-haired beauty established herself on the island and proclaimed herself its rightful possessor. With her wife two men, Robert Phillips and Alfred Rudolf Lorenz, said to be Germans. The baroness said she was from Vienna.

Soon strange tales began to filter out of the Galapagos—tales of the fierce tempest of the "empress" who carried a pistol from a silver boat about her neck and knew how to use it.

Then came the story she had vanished. Four months later the mummified body of Lorenz was found on lonely, waterless Marchena Island, far to the north.

Nearly was the body of a second man, identified as that of Trygve Nagrud, a sailing master and fish trader, the "baroness" colony or to have been a member of another group which went to the island to practice medicine and eat raw vegetables. But to this day there has been no trace of the baroness and Phillips.

The Cold Old Days

Not Many People Would Care To Return To Those

How would you like—
To go out to the woodpile every morning and whack up enough wood for the breakfast fire in the old range?

To hike over to the ice house every morning and get a chunk of ice so Ma could keep the milk sweet and the butter firm?

To go out to the well every morning and fill up the water bucket so Ma could wash and cook all day?

To trim the weeds on a lot of kerenee lamps and patch the chimneys with old newspapers so you could read at night?

To go to bed every night with the children because there wouldn't be anything to keep you?

If you would, you'd like to live in the good old days they're always talking about. —General Electric Philadelphia Work News.

Applies To Many Things

Erasing Worn-Out Pimp In Just Waste Of Time

When a pump handle continues printing it is because the pump is out of order. An insane person might continue to pour kerosene of printing down the old pump and get very little water out of it. A sane man would mend the pump or get a new one; then a pint of printing would be plenty to bring all the water that is in the well. —F. P. Backman, West New York, N.J.

Selecting Life Work

Parents Should Advise Children But Let Them Make Choice

Magistrate Arthur Harnham, of Windsor, recently told graduates of the arts course at Assumption College that a student should choose his own career and not rely on the judgment of his parents. Unfortunately, some parents prevail upon their children to enter professions for which they have no real inclination and no natural bent. This is why there are so many road runs in square holes. Many professional failures. Unhappily, there are parents who take so little interest in the development of their children that they do not know what profession or other calling they are really best fitted for.

The parent who has a sense of his responsibilities will study his children in order that he may be able to give them helpful advice when the time arrives for them to choose their life work. But he will not adopt a horse-headed view of his children's life, nor will he insist that they do not understand. If he finds his son choosing a profession for which he has no natural bent, he will consider his qualifications, he will advise him kindly of his opinion, and tell him why he is more likely to succeed in another profession. And the son, if he is wise, will give heed to his father's advice, when he is making a great decision of his material life. —St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Mortal Accidents Increasing

708 Deaths In Ontario Last Year, According To Official Statistics

Ontario motor car accidents caused an average of 22 deaths per year, according to official statistics, in 1933, an increase of more than 40 per cent, according to official statistics. In 1932, 568 last year, 708. This includes monetary loss through deaths, injuries and property damage, including hospital care and expenses, cost of collecting evidence.

During 1937 there were 304 hit-and-run drivers involved in accidents, as against 22 the previous year, this type of driver being responsible for 14 deaths and 138 injured. Police apprehended 170 hit-and-run motorists.

Recessive speed was given as the greatest contributing cause in accidents with driving on the wrong side of the road next. Figures also showed the most dangerous time on highways was between five and eight o'clock in the evening.

Last year 230 drunk drivers were apprehended. Highway fatalities with 177 in 1936, 161 of the accidents in 1937 produced fatalities. Ninety-five drivers with various physical defects figured a seven fatal accidents.

Will Combat Measles

Doctor Says Child Under Four Should Not Have Them

That old wives' tale that it is better to let the children have measles like chickenpox and measles and "get it over with early" is due to be set full of holes. The children's bureau of Washington took the occasion of child health day, May 1, to do it. No child under four, says Dr. Marian Cane of the bureau staff, should have any of the "children's diseases," but there's no easy way to prevent them. While "chicken little bugs" that produce diphtheria have been backed "way into the corner in the last 10 years" or so, other "household" diseases of measles, mumps, scarlet fever, and whooping cough, are doing well, thank you. Breathe the fly, and keep the chicken up. Avoid mosquitoes and other biting insects. They transmit some diseases by biting sick people and then bringing healthy ones. When summer gets here make the youngsters wear some kind of shoes or sandals. Barefooted children are a certain germ through cuts or bruises on their feet.

A remarkable photograph taken at the moment "Chiniford", favourite at the Bridge Boss Film Meeting, came a cropper at the last fence shows the rider, Mr. Backus, about to perform a somersault over the horse's head. In spite of this fall he remounted and finished the race, coming in second.

Three carloads of fresh, grade A Canadian eggs will be on the British market in this month. Each car will contain 600 cases of 30 dozen each. The assignment follows shipments of winter-produced fresh eggs earlier in the year.

One carload from the Canadian poultry pool, Winnipeg, will be sent from Montreal. Another from the same source will be shipped along with one from the co-operative egg grading stations in eastern Ontario. Negotiations now are underfoot for further shipments.

The three carloads are going to one buyer, Henry Macdonald and Son, of Glasgow, for distribution to the larger retail shops in the Glasgow area. Arrangements are being made through the Trade and Commerce Department for the stores to make special displays of the Canadian product. Particulars will be available at the booth in the Canadian pavilion in the exhibition where the eggs may be obtained.

The paradox of France is that the French talk at going where their logic and their theories lead them. M. Daladier should remember what his handsomeness in an earlier demonstration shouted to an American spectator when both were being shoved off the road in Paris last November: "Why doesn't somebody stop? We want to be stopped."

Princess has New Ambition
Elizabeth Expressed Wish To Learn To Play The Piano

Princess Elizabeth, her presumptive to the throne, was reported to have a new ambition—to play a tune. She first saw the instrument when the Poles Works band gave a concert at Windsor castle. After the performance, King George and Queen Elizabeth and the Princess met Fred Mortimer, the bandmaster.

"What's that big instrument over there?" Elizabeth inquired gravely. "That is a big bass," Mortimer replied.

"Oh, I would like to play that," said the Princess.

Mortimer was embarrassed until the King interrupted with the remark: "You aren't nearly big enough to manage that—in any case you wouldn't have wind enough."

Facts To Be Considered In Connection With Farming Operations In Canada

Analyze Food For Stock

Federal Department of Agriculture Employs Girl For This Work

There are indeed living in a scientific age. There was a picture of a pretty, young lady in one of the Toronto papers recently, and it was explained that she is the microscopist in the Plant Products Branch of the Federal Department of Agriculture.

And what does she do? If a manufacturer makes a product for live stock or poultry or any such thing this young lady—Jean McDugan—will analyze samples to see that the product lives up to the claims made for it. If it is stated that the product is made of alfalfa, she will analyze the alfalfa to see if it is what it is claimed to be.

It was informed that within a few days a farmer found that his pigs refused to eat a certain kind of prepared food. A sample was sent to Miss McDugan, and she said it was no wonder the pigs would not eat it. The food had gone rancid. In which case we suppose the vitamins would be the same thing.

Perhaps the pigs themselves in this day are getting a trifle particular regarding what they eat. Now that they have been elevated to the status of "pigs" in the world-wide bacon trade they may feel a bit snooty. As we recall pigs were ready for meat. They became restless about the time of day when the whey can in season was left outside the gate on the round of the wagon from the cheese factory. And there were a number of pigs which went into the mixing trough. The results were placed in the pig trough. It is hard indeed to recall the time when the huge sows had such a good time of it. They refused to eat. Most times they were so anxious to eat that they got their feet in the trough and they never seemed to be much on showing over to make room for another pig.

But now we learn the hogs are turning up their snouts, after which the farmer sends off to Miss McDugan to see what's the matter.

Undertake Five-Year Task

Thelma's Helping King James

A group of distinguished theologians, including Professor W. R. Taylor, of the University of Toronto, have undertaken a monumental five-year task of revising the Bible to give an "official version embodying the best results of modern scholarship."

The revision, projected by the International Council of Religious Education, will be the first since 1901 when the United States standard version was published.

Dr. William A. Lewis of the University of Chicago, one of 12 scholars chosen to do the work, said the Bible that the revision was undertaken because "some words and phrases of the King James version, published in 1611, are obscure, if not actually unintelligible to the modern reader."

Cats In Aquarium Taught To Leave

Shocking events are occurring in New York city's aquarium, Christopher W. Coates, of the aquarium has announced. He said the popular has many cats, used to control rats in the building. But the cats are allowed to play around the tanks filled with electric eels. The eels are charged with electricity, which stuns the cats. After that, all fish look like electric eels to the cats.

Outwitted The Hummer
Bill Nye, the humorist, was giving a lecture, or rather an exhibition of the particular brand of homespun wit, in the famous old Boston Theatre, when a farmer, who had just arrived by train from northern Vermont, arose in the far reaches of the gallery and called out: "Speak louder, please, so I can hear."

Quick as a flash Nye cried back: "Why don't you pay more and come nearer, so as to hear?"

And quickly quick came the Yankee's rejoinder: "Cause it ain't worth it."

Fishes that live near the surface of the water have large eyes; those in deep water have small eyes and poor eyesight.

Suitability of the enterprise in the area and the low cost of operation are two big things to be considered in Canadian farming. A. M. Shaw, director of marketing service, federal department of agriculture, said in an address at Toronto.

Certain parts of Canada have developed on an export basis and others on the domestic market, the former depend on the latter, the latter depend on the former. The annual banquet of the Agriculture Canada Livestock Union.

Wheat can use moisture on western land faster than any other cereal crop, and much faster than grass. Mr. Shaw said. On the other hand, clover could be produced in eastern Ontario because of the good grass. He said that the clover, when it is green, while the western rancher sells his grass as meat and not cheese.

Increasing high prices for butter and what he said was a recent drop of 2,000,000 pounds in consumption, he said, because of the fact that 27 and 40 cents a pound was "just too much to pay." Mr. Shaw added: "Prices will only go so high and then you are on the danger line."

Part of Ontario's trouble in marketing the pig is because of the fact that there were no definite weights for a definite market. "We have to market outside of Canada," he said. "We have to go to the States."

Mr. Shaw said the trend in production of pig is toward the westward. Statistics showed 11½ hogs a farm in the north, the highest in Canada, he said.

Discussing the problems of animal husbandry, which went into the mixing trough, the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, predicted the health of cattle some day would be checked by the fact that "we're doing twice a year."

"We can talk of markets, but after all we've got to go back to the producer; he is the man doing the job," said Dr. Christie. "Other agencies are only supplementary."

A Long Term Lease

Was Obtained In England In 1407 For 10,000 Years

We are reminded of Canada's historical youth by reading in an English paper of the purchase of the northwest corner of Shropshire, in the Welsh border, established in 1407, when a lease for 10,000 years of eight acres of land from Sir Watkin Williams Wynn. This site is said occupied as a summer house in the Field of the Cross, from a legend that the body of King Oswald was hung from a cross after the battle of Maserfield in the year 642, when the pagan King Penda, of Mercia, was the victor, and the spot where Oswald was killed is now the site of the school playing-fields occupying the scene of the Seventh Century battle.

The idea of a 10,000-year lease staggers the imagination. It presumably dates from the founding of the school, and assumes that the world will continue to roll on its axis for a longer period than partially civilized man has tried the earth. As for the discovery of America in 1492, the first settlement in Fort Royal in Nova Scotia in 1605 and the founding of Quebec in 1608, these seem like mere earthly occurrences.

A 10,000-year lease from 1407 takes chances of Britain not being blown away by bombs in 1939 or 1940 and the Empire staying on the job after the war. To teach them a lesson, the cats are allowed to play around the tanks filled with electric eels. The eels are charged with electricity, which stuns the cats. After that, all fish look like electric eels to the cats.

BORROW FROM A BANK?

WHY does anybody borrow money?

Here is the answer: Usually to make a profit or to use the money for his advantage.

Be the borrower a farmer, marketing organisation, lumberman, miner, fisherman, rancher, manufacturer—none ever borrows from a bank and pays interest except to gain a benefit outweighing the interest charges.

Every Canadian dollar represents tangible wealth already produced, or wages paid for services rendered.

Every Canadian dollar issued can be described accurately as to purpose, as a wealth-producing, wage-paying, profit-seeking dollar.

Occasionally some borrowed dollars become temporarily deadweight debt—perhaps you suffer a loss for a season through drought or other natural calamity. But with a better season, better prices and brighter business, the loan has a chance to recover its loan.

"I borrow $1,000 from the bank, paying interest because the bank is rendering me a service," one man instances. He goes on thus:

"Why do I borrow the $1,000?"
"To use in a business deal and make a profit."

"My deal concluded successfully, I repay the bank and have a profit of say $100, which I put to my credit in the bank."

The bank has back its $1,000 and interest, and I have $100 I didn't have before.

"Multiply that borrowing of mine, my use of the money, my repayment and my profit, by many borrowers, day after day, and you see what is happening—a continuous revolving process throughout the year in the business world."

A farmer borrows for seed, cultivation or harvesting; a fisherman borrows for bait, boat or wages; a manufacturer borrows against raw materials being fabricated, to pay wages to finish and market his goods—but none of these borrows except in the hope of profit to himself in supplying the needs of others.

Banking is not mysterious. A farmer's co-operative marketing organisation uses bank credit so that the farmer may get cash for his crop at the elevator without waiting for it to reach Liverpool.

A merchant borrows from the bank and is enabled to pay his bills early, take advantage of discounts, and pass part of his savings on to his customers.

A small farmer with 20 hogs borrowed $50 for feed, paid $1.75 interest and was enabled to sell his hogs for $100 more than he would have got on an earlier market. His net profit was $48.75. That is an authentic case. Here is another:

A hog-raiser on a large scale paid $100 interest on a loan for food. He writes us that he made a net profit of nearly $5,000.

These are instances of the kind of services bank credit, exchanged for individual credit, produces.

performs as an everyday routine, in Canada. Any community can supply scores of similar examples.

What is money?
Coinage, Bank of Canada notes, bank notes, deposits.

Chartered banks now issue their notes up to a legal limit of 85 per cent of their paid-up capital. Yearly this is being reduced and the right of note-issue as steadily vested in the Bank of Canada.

A chartered bank's notes are the first charge on its assets. In case of trouble they must be paid off before a single cent can be paid on deposits or on any other debts owed by the bank. To make doubly sure that notes will be redeemed, each bank pays into a fund held by the Minister of Finance, an amount of cash equal to five per cent of the average of its bank notes outstanding. This is called the "Bank Circulation Redemption Fund." The total of this fund is available for the purpose of redeeming the outstanding notes of any bank.

Notes of the Bank of Canada are money—legal tender—cash—that Bank's notes and deposits are backed (April 30, 1938) by 53.37 per cent of gold and silver bullion and foreign exchange.

Notes of the chartered banks, too, are money—their promise to pay; every dollar backed by more than twenty dollars of assets. They are redeemable, on demand, in cash.

Your deposit in a chartered bank also is money—you can buy things with it. It arose from your labour, production and thrift. It is redeemable in cash. It is the measure of your real wealth. You may make payments by cheque upon it. When your cheque goes through the Clearing House system, it must be met by the bank on which it is drawn. Any balances as between banks have to be settled in cash daily.

Your Canadian dollars are useful factors in a system that produces wealth for all of Canada.

Civil Service Control

Promoting Field For Cutting Down Governmental Costs

Personnel control in provincial and municipal administrations was held up by the Citizen Research Institute of Canada as a promising field for cutting governmental costs and improving governmental efficiency. The possibilities for substantial improvement were suggested in the fact the provinces now spend $40,000,000 a year in salaries and wages and the municipalities $150,000,000. The Dominion payroll is $85,000,000.

"Any attempt to secure efficiency and economy in government depends on the individual and group efficiency of its employees and management. The annual reports of the Civil Service Commission of Canada constitute a record of achievement in the field of personnel administration."

In only two or three provinces could anything approaching the control of the Civil Service Commission be found, although recent developments in some others indicated future accomplishment. In each province had a Civil Service Commission like that in the Federal, establishing standards and eligibility lists for municipal employment as well as provincial. "Canada would have taken a long step forward in setting her house in order," the institute said.

It suggested the "professionalizing" of municipal personnel by the removal of officers from one municipality to another to establish municipal service as a career, the gradual elimination of favoritism and local politics from appointments and the setting up of a sound pension scheme.

"In the provincial municipal public service will be to have in Canada a municipal service," the institute said. "Any nation-wide inquiry which does not give adequate attention to this field must fail to show a nation-wide plan of public economy."

Retirement of Judges

Justice Department Studying The Question Of Retirement Ages

A high official of the justice department said that the department was studying the question of a retirement plan for judges. It is the supreme courts of the provinces, but he declined to state whether any specific proposal would be placed before parliament.

"Every year such representations are made to the government and give all due consideration to the question. The question was not new and had been discussed by previous governments."

"Any legislation would not make retirement compulsory, he added. Under terms of the British North America Act judges of the supreme courts of the provinces are appointed for life."

A retirement age of 75 years has been suggested. This already applies to judges of the Supreme Court of Canada and the Federal Court of Canada, both under federal jurisdiction.

U.S. President Urged To Summon An International Conference

The league adopted a resolution urging the United States president to summon an international conference of experienced authorities to formulate a constitution for an all-inclusive democratic, non-military federation of nations.

Breaking The Law

In Blomberg, N.D., members of the Legislature discovered that, because of a punctuation error, it has been illegal to sleep in a North Dakota hotel for nine years. The law (passed in 1929): "No hotel, restaurant, dining room or kitchen shall be used as a sleeping or dining room by an employee or other person."

Some Queer Remedies

People In Olden Days Tried Many Dramatic Cures

An 86-year-old London man died recently after treating himself with a hot iron, to cure constipation. Drastic perhaps, but when King Charles II. was ill his doctors bled him twice, gave him saltpetre, sea-bitter, rock salt, camomile flowers, linseed, cinnamon, fennel seed, a sweating powder of hellebore root, white wine, a powder of cowslip flowers, aniseed, extract of Chinese leaves, milk, rue and saffron.

The doctors' study that these "remedies" were unsuccessful tried black cherry water, melon seeds, dissolved peas, gentian root, nutmeg, quinine and cloves, followed by 40 drops of extract of human skulls to try convulsion, and a mixture of Raleigh's antidote pearl jump and sumatra.

The "iron cure" was recently revived by an eminent British surgeon, who claimed to have cured more than 400 cases, many of them apparently permanent, by its use.

Mrs. Neville Chamberlain, the wife of the Prime Minister, recalled a few years ago the case of a man she knew who labored the fumes from fried spiders as a cure for whooping cough. He had a friend who always wore the skin of an eel around his waist as a safeguard against rheumatism.

A fifteenth-century leech book contains cures for the gout sufferers. Take a piece of leather or linen cloth and heat it well at fire and lay thereon a powder of aloes and lay on the foot, and if ever he shall be whole this medicine shall heal him."

Seventeen cures are given for "ache in the head," including binding wormwood wax and incense about the head, chewing a root of pebbly root in oil or laying a plain hand-rolled egg to the forehead.

Pleasant cures evolved in the eighteenth century include a powder made from 20 to 40 burnt loads for whooping cough, and a whipping with a bunch of green nettles for hysteria.

Some unusual cures have been accomplished in modern times by the use of short-wave vibrator foot massage. Dying any psychology have been claimed as a cure for short-sightedness. Music has proved effective as a cure for sleeplessness. And when not played it has been found to raise high temperatures in cases of fever.

Forget About The Ice

Explanation Of Temperance Advocate Was Not Good Enough

A man famous for his advice to advocates of the cause of temperance explained a carpenter to make some alterations in his house. In repairing the roof it was found necessary to remove the wall when some things were brought to light which greatly surprised the workmen.

"Well, I declare," exclaimed the man, "that is curious. It must be old Captain Bunch who left those things there when he occupied the premises thirty years ago."

"Perhaps he did," returned the discoverer, "but that ice in the bowl must have been well frozen to remain unmelted."—Wall Street Journal.

SPANISH CIVIL WAR DOES NOT STOP FRUIT GROWERS

Spain may be in the clutches of the war god Mars, but the fruit growers won't let him interfere with their livelihood. Our photograph, taken in the town of La Peltusa on the Franco-Spanish border, shows transports pouring into France loaded with fruit.

A Real Live Model

Missy Moore Once Called Mortimer Was Disney's Friend

J. Carmichael Jones tells this story in Chamber's Journal. "Disney held many jobs. These included American Army ambulance driver; messenger boy; advertising designer; and three-in-one commercial artist. His first step towards the making of his real vocation was when he made some animated cartoons of local events, and sold them to three Kansas City theatre managers. He arranged to furnish one subject a week, cartooning local happenings. It is interesting to note that his production costs for this film were about ninety cents, and the current Disney productions work out at a hundred and sixty cents that amount."

In the unexplored realm of animated sketches Walt Disney stumbled on Mickey Mouse, then unknown—very unnamed. Mice had always fascinated him. He caught them in water-baskets around the studio and kept them in a cage so that he could study their bright eyes and amusing tricks.

One of them, bolder than the rest, would make escapades on his owner's drawing-board. He seemed to have a personality of his own. Disney christened him Mortimer Mouse. But that seemed too formal; Mickey seemed much more fitting for the tiny fellow. How little the poor mouse dreamed then that that mouse's name might one day be more famous than his own.

Adding To Language

Chinese Inventing Old Names For Modern Instruments Of War

The war in China has enriched the Chinese vocabulary, said Father William Amyot, French missionary, who was a recent visitor to Calgary.

He said the Chinese have invented many old names for modern instruments of war. Before the Japanese came the Chinese had no words in their language for tanks and machine guns. Now they call a machine gun a "quick gun" and a tank is a "gun car."

Father Amyot was on route to Toronto on furlough after 10 years in the mission fields of China. He is accompanied by Father J. J. MacDonald, a missionary in Chongqing province for seven years.

Malnutrition Problems

League Of Nations Has Been Giving This Attention

Malnutrition in many countries has brought such an international problem into being that the League of Nations is giving it attention. Constance Hayward, of Montreal, N.E., representative in the maritime provinces of the League of Nations Society, and field secretary of the society in Canada, told the Local Council of Women at their regular meeting at Windsor, Ont.

Public education regarding the necessity of sufficient quantity of protective foods would improve the situation, Miss Hayward said. Such foods are expensive, adding an economic aspect to the problem, she added.

It is a sad paradox that while agricultural producers have been unable to deal remunerative markets, many parts of the world are in need of better food supplies, she said. "During the depression, the League of Nations and the international labor organization studied the problem and it became clear that improvement required international co-operation as well as national efforts."

Indian Chief Surprised

Did Not Know Artificial Hair Could Be Bought

When Lafayette, in his old age, came back to America for a long visit, an old Indian chief, whom he had known here, called on him. The chief was completely bald, and he expressed his intense surprise at Lafayette's being able to retain a full head of hair, whereupon Lafayette took off his wig, an act which delighted but surprised the old chief still more, for he did not know that there were such things as wigs. Much of our so-called civilization is about as artificial as a wig.—The Argonaut.

An Undesirable Record

A. Bernard Leckie, Philadelphia, crime investigator, says one out of every 25 U.S. citizens has a criminal record. That sounds like a record, too, but it's high time, as people near said a few years back, to put on another record.

The United States' bureau of home economics developed more than 35 ways of serving corn meal.

Not Always Malicious

Gossip Is Really Just Exchange Of News And Ideas

The Rev. R. Anderson, talking of the Rev. H. Dagonnet, strongly condemned gossip and "front gate" conferences.

Perhaps Mr. Anderson didn't think deeply enough before he spoke. It is an age-old masculine error that women gossip and men don't. If you go into the four-ale bar you will find men gossiping "twenty to the dozen."

You will find it in the Lobby of the House of Commons. You will find it in the Athenaeum (and the bldg are the worst!). You will find it in a ship's engine-room and you will find it in a front-line trench.

The only difference between men and women here is that men organize themselves to find comfortable places to do it in.

Gossip is an exchange of news and ideas. It is sometimes malicious and trouble-making, that is the sin of the gossipers. But they would still make trouble even if they couldn't gossip. Life would be pretty dull if we all lived up to the idea that we shouldn't talk when we're nothing to say.—London Sunday Dispatch.

The Old Testament

Hebrew Bible Ends With Second Chronicles And Not Malachi

According to popular belief, the Old Testament ends with God's warning, "Let I come and smite the earth with a curse."

However, the Old Testament in the original Hebrew does not end with Malachi, but with Second Chronicles. The Hebrew Bible ends with these words: "Whosoever there is among you of all the people of the Lord be with him—let him go up."

The Correct Costume

"Air raid precautions equate at Windsor, England, are to be uniformed. Women volunteers will wear blue serge, blue slacks, blue tulle and blue overalls, with blue macintosh. Men will wear blue tunic, red-stuffed trousers, peak caps and waterproof leggings."

Iron plates were used in the earliest attempts at clothing, with very crude results.

Streamlined Trains

Are Making Free Transportation Impossible For Railroad Bobs

Progress ever carried with it the loss of picturesque quality. Thus the old style of whaling disappeared when ketches replaced whale oil in large and steel was found as good as whalebone for reinforcing ladies' foundation garments. Whaling came back, but it is now a disorganized, unprofitable, there are still cowboys who can ride in Madison Square Park, but it is no longer the other way that some cattlemen are now using airplanes for herding. Lumbermen have radio and "play" golf. However, what one was thinking of was an incident in the railroad yards at Buffalo the other day, when the engineer himself had conducted of the Twentieth Century Limited, together with two policemen, moved for half an hour to extract a perplexed but unarmed bobo from behind the tender of a modern streamlined train. He had got jammed in the coupling hose—a disastrous proceeding.

The railroad bobs of former days was a skilled seaman. He would wait in the yards until a freight train was pulling out and the railway bobs would be waiting nearby to get away neatly on to the rods, evading the hungry wheels. He would ride the tumpers in the darkness of night. He would wait until the last moment between the tender and the front end of the baggage car, and ride blind baggage, which was apparently what the poor fellow at Buffalo was trying to do. But the streamlined train, with its four-ale bar, was entirely too much for him, and the streamlined freight train of tomorrow would be a disaster to him.

He will join the trappers, the Indian boys, the Santa Fe graders, the old-fashioned bobs, the cabbies—his occupation, like Lady's, gone, streamlined into legend.—New York Times.

Young Folk Worry

Troubles Of Many Minds Breathe The Young People

In this day and age of care-free youth it would seem impossible that the lives of many young people give worry, and yet such seems to be the case.

Dr. James Page of the University of Rochester, conducted a survey that throws a disturbing light on the mental reaction of youth. A number of many different kinds of best these young people who might be taken as a fair sample of the young people of the nation. It was found that a certain number of the girls were distressed because they thought their looks were poor.

One of the most common causes of worry is the fact that many of the young people are worried because they think they would have to support their parents. A large number of both sexes are worried because they fear that they would have no financial security in the world. Some were distressed by the possibility of assuming responsibility after graduation.

No New Frontier

To Which Men Can Turn To Get A Fresh Start

One of the things which have made the depression of the thirties difficult to deal with is the lack of a frontier. Formerly, when things got bad, when employment vanished and people became desperate, it was always possible, by hook or crook, to get away to the West or North and start over again. The frontier furnished an outlet, an incentive, and the slim chance of the dream was undertaken. But to-day there is no frontier to which men can turn.—Vancouver Province.

"Maybe you think I couldn't get it," said Mr. Wyncoop. "Why, between us we have nine million, twenty million, thirty million."

"We?"
"You, Me, you and Ernie."

"I shall give the matter most serious thought," promised Sir Peter. "Perhaps you'd care to drop in on me in Leonard street when you're in London."

"I'll be with you," said Mr. Wyncoop. "Let's sing—"

"I'm from Iowa, Iowa,
Out where the tall corn grows" rising when he came to the words "tall corn" and making his hand above his head to show the phenomenal height attained by the crops of his native state.

"Jolly good, that," applauded Sir Peter. "I say, let's get a couple of tenses and form a quartet."

With a champagne bottle under one arm, and Mrs. Clara-Maria Phelps under the other, the Earl of Bingley was making his way toward his study.

"I want you see my mugger," said the Earl. "I've some sporting prints that may interest you."

"Mugger?" giggled Mrs. Phelps. "Mugger? What a mugger word!"

"I brought this bottle of fox along in case we got thirsty," said the Earl. "Does one get thirsty in a mugger?" inquired Mrs. Phelps.

"One does."

"Mugger glasses in hand, on a sofa in the study they regarded each other with the eyes of doves."

"I say, do you believe in love at first sight?" asked the Earl.

"It's what the startled Mrs. Phelps. "I don't mean Cypriotes," said the Earl.

"Really, your lordship, I haven't given the matter much thought of late."

"It's not a question of head," said the Earl. "It's your heart."

"I've thumped his stiff stick in the region of his chest."

"Like champagne?" she asked.

"Just like champagne," he said. "It must be true."

"Give it a try," urged the Earl. He filled their glasses.

"I say, my dear girl," he said. "I believe you're flirting with me."

"I can hardly be described as a flirt," said Mrs. Phelps.

"Aren't you?" said the Earl. "Merely in arms."

"I'm forty-four."

"Just the right age. In sixty-by-the-calendar—but twenty-one here—Again he thumped his bosom."

"I'm thirty," said Mrs. Phelps. "Thirty? Oh, I see—Here you are."

Again he filled her wine glass.

"Happy?" he asked.

"I haven't been so happy since I was chosen for the day chain at Vauxes," said Clara-Maria Phelps dramatically.

The Earl raised his glass.

"Here's to knowing you better, toots," he said.

She clinked her glass against his.

"And vice versa, big boy," she said.

Parties end. Mervin was stealing into the shore at midnight and the Earl sped the last guest to bed, and gained his own with only a little assistance from Crump.

From more of aristocratic and plebeian origins sounded softly through castle halls.

There is no correlation between the intelligence of children and their parents; and the influence of environment determines the growth or decline of children's intellectual development, according to the report of a 35-year study of children by Dr. Harold Skeels and Dr. Betha Valmista of the Iowa University Child Welfare Station.

Dr. Skeels, psychologist for the Iowa State Board of Control, has discovered that underprivileged children, taken from inadequate environment and placed in foster homes, respond to the interest and contact by remarkable intellectual gains.

He finds no correlation between the intelligence of true parents and their children, but notes the larger small boys and girls remain in poor surroundings, the duller they become. He points out that if these children are removed early enough to foster homes they have a good chance to become normal.

Dr. Wellman has recorded that higher intelligence levels are the rule rather than exception following the stimulating atmosphere of nursery schools. Significantly, during summer vacations at home, without the incentive of school and influence of companionship, children show little or no development.

Miss Wellman studied the later progress of many boys and girls who received careful and sympathetic early training and discovered those transferred to progressive institutions of this type continued to gain in intelligence, while those who entered less progressive schools lost considerable ground.

"Children thrive best," Dr. Wellman concludes, "in schools where they are taught to think for themselves instead of obeying blindly. They do best in groups with children with whom they are as great or better than their own."

With prospect for the best Canadian wheat crop in many years, eyes of the growers turn again to the problem of world markets. So quickly does the picture shift that nations once regarded as formidable competitors in export may be forced by a bad season to look for imports.

Inherits Fortune

Former Receiver $200,000 From Uncle Sam Awarded 40 Years Ago

Fortune's horn of plenty is pouring $200,000 into the lap of George Robinson, farmer of the Conklin district, 170 miles northeast of Edmonton, because he was kind to a Klondike prospector 40 years ago.

"When I was a lad of 23, I stumbled on a uncle for the gold rush of '97," he said. "Twenty years passed and there was no word from my uncle. Now, just a few months ago, I got a message from a Seattle solicitor. Now I am owner of a $200,000 fox farm in Alaska and a ranch in Montana."

"They were bequeathed to me by the uncle I had almost forgotten, but who never forgot an act of kindness."

A widower, father of five children, the 62-year-old farmer was in Edmonton, planning to sell his farm 100 miles north of the city to take him to Alaska, where he will take care of his newly-acquired fox farm.

"I took my $3,000 out of the bank at 10 o'clock one morning. At 11 a.m. I was aboard the train and heading for the Klondike," he said.

"I never saw or heard of him again until word came from Seattle last January."

Different Kinds Of Greetings

Those Employed By Other Countries Send Very Strange

"When we meet a friend we say 'How do you do?' or 'How are you?'"

In other countries there are different kinds of greetings, some of which sound very strange.

In some parts of India the greeting is "Prasade God, is your nose fat?" to which the reply is "Thank God, my nose is fat."

"How do you do?" is the question. "Then, may you live a thousand years."

In Persia when a person meets a friend he says, "May your shadow never grow less." In Egypt people say, "How do you prosper?"

The Chinese and Japanese remark is, "How is your stomach?" Have you eaten your rice?"

Russian people inquire "How do you live?" In Poland the question is "How do you keep yourself?"

French folk politely ask, "How do you care yourself?" While in Holland a cordial greeting would be, "How do you fare?"

When the Italian meet they say, "How do you stand?"

A Philadelphia Record columnist asserts that there were enough Smiths in the American forces during the Great War to make 15 regiments of 2,600 men each. In simple arithmetic, 24,180.

Only about 50,000,000 of India's 323,000,000 population are able to read any one of the dozen primitive languages spoken there.

Political Patronage

Speaker Says It Is Unknown In The British Civil Service

Political patronage is unknown in the British civil service and any candidate for government jobs who seeks to enlist political support is automatically disqualified, Sir Francis Flood, British high commissioner to Canada, told the house committee on civil service affairs.

In the British scheme there is no appointing of former members of parliament to government jobs and ministers' private secretaries are not absorbed in government service after their tenure of office as private secretary.

Open competitive examination held under the direction of the civil service commission was the keynote of the public service in Great Britain.

This commission was appointed under letters patent by the prime minister and its personnel consisted of civil servants. It set the examinations, issued certificates of appointment and controlled the internal affairs of the service.

A. T. Barber, Only Man Who Knows Value, Died Recently

A. T. Barber, 80, only man who knew the value of the contents of Windsor Castle—the royal residence, died recently at Hove, England. Queen Victoria commissioned him 40 years ago to evaluate contents of the castle, which included gold plate, works of art, antiques and china. Mr. Barber, an antique dealer who formerly was mayor of Windsor, promised the Queen he would never divulge the findings.

Cats can see better in the daytime than at night, but do most of their hunting at night because their prey is out at that time.
